Flooding yes, but the emphasis seemed to be on taxes. I'll check on it though. As a side note, this was also sent on Friday -- to Beth Leschper -- and I was just cc'd.

What happens is that folks out here get weary of Government. That is a given. But when it is Government for Government, they get real weary. The little guy who really needs it in times of distress gets nothing, only comments like "private sector can fend for itself". That doesn't leave a real good impression on common hard working folks that pay their taxes and try to conform to all the rules, regulations and hassles that Govt. imposes.

Subject: Wesley Loy

Just spoke with Wesley Loy about the special message email. He is going to do a story on this later this afternoon. I let him know that it is government's job to inform Alaskans on issues that can have an impact on them. I reiterated that this is nothing new, previous administrations have done it, lawmakers send out newsletters, agencies send out newsletters to constituents etc etc. I asked him – what's the difference if the Governor holds a news conference or goes on a radio show to push what she feels is important? Wesley wants to ask Mike Nizich about what specific examples from previous administrations. He also wants to know if he can have access to the lists. He is going to call me later when he starts writing the email story. BTW- he admitted he was a hothead to Mike last night and apologized.

In the meantime- he is also working on a budget story for tomorrow and wants to know if anyone wants to comment.

So we'll need to be proactive in our budget message and get out in front of the critics' message that you know is coming (from the leggies and our usual critics): that WE grew the budget unsustainably, due to the operating budget increases, and that WE have no fiscal discipline. Let's try not to have to react to what's coming, but get in front with messaging while explaining increases, including tax credits. And explaining again our need to reign in their capital spending via sensible vetoes.

Again though, can we veto anything out of that final operating budget?

Another thing- dumb, but in case the Ear calls: one of Lyda's aides stopped me in the hall to say the building was getting a kick out of my "burnt toast" episode this morning that caused the fire alarms to go off for 20 minutes and caused an evacuation. She thought it was funny I was cooking breakfast in the capitol and burnt it.

I assured her I was not in the building this morning, I was not cooking breakfast here at any time, and I did not burn any toast.

She looked at me warily, I doubt she believed me. Just a head's up.

Mike- Wesley reported you had a "no comment" comment re: his question last night re: 30,000 biz lic addresses used to notify on biz lic fee legislation. Did you talk to him yet this morning to follow up? (He reported that you told him you'd be happy to talk to him in the morning about it.). The accusation is there was a violation of state email policy with the activity. He'll need clarification asap before that issue gets even more spun up. Pls let me know what Wesley's response was/is after you talk to him.

Amazing out of all the shenanigans being pulled by lawmakers that he spun this up as a "wrong" on admin's part. Unapologetic is our stance, as there is nothing to hide from the public on our part, and critics should be asking what is it that any lawmaker is afraid of the public knowing...hence their outrage that information was revealed to Alaskans.

Comm Dept can catch this one if it looks like Wesley will follow through on his threat to write a front-pager.

The guy was a real jerk and Heather Brakes as a witness was outraged. It was 9:00 PM and I was working on trying to get a couple of things out of the Senate and he interrupted and asked a question about sending emails. I told him it was appropriate and the administration contacts Alaskans all the time about issues that impact them. He asked a question about databases and I told him I would talk to him in the morning. He acted like he had a gotcha, was very aggressive and he was threatening a front page story.

We will get more information to him right away. I just talked to Nizich and he is working with the press office.

There's $4 million in the capital budget for ANGDA. I believe this is seperate than the $8 million the administration requested that was not included.

I believe the request probably came from the ANSCA CEO's but I am not certain. They were very interested in it and felt they had several legis who would help them.

When we met with them in Juneau the Governor and all of us explained that it was not legal for us to take sides on an initiative. We have been consistent with this message.

We also explained that if the legislature appropriated a small amount of money with language specific to an initiative then the Governor, I, or our people could educate and explain initiatives and their problems without risk of being accused of taking sides. Further it would be legal for us to take sides if we chose. The CEO's are very worried that if the initiatives pass then all large mining would stop and then even oil and gas would be impacted.

We told the CEO's that we would not ask for the money. But if it was made available we could educate and explain the initiatives without any legal issue for us.

Jim Minnery's wife (Alaska Family Council) had the best quotes. They have a decent sized mailing list so hopefully these quotes make it in there: referencing Lyda she used words like "power grab" "completely self-serving" and "extremely disappointing".

Minnery told me he intends to hold these lawmakers accountable for this decision.

Lesil especially poo-poo'd Fred on the floor for even trying to force the vote.

Truly, if voters understood how measures like this get killed amidst selfish political power struggles, they'd be up in arms. Is Dahlstrom, et al, ticked about this?

Exactly. That's what I mean when I say we've had such few "asks" of the legislature - they've all been good for Alaska, yet we end up with so little after essentially conceeding so, so much. They constantly "one-up" Alaskans/us. A change in tactic must occur or special session and next year will just be another repeat of us working our butts off and only being able to take the tiniest of baby steps towards reform... and we'll need very impacting messages to be publicized about all these shenanigans. I've cc'd Comm. Dept.

Stedman's comment was the email shouldn't have been sent, instead the chairman should have been requested to move it! What a joke. How many times was he asked to move it? Well maybe the blog/story will give the issue publicity and the follow up can open a door to also speak about tire tax and other good bills they're still trying to kill because they're either greedy spenders and/or they hate to see our name on anything that could pass. Exactly. That's what I mean when I say we've had such few "asks" of the legislature - they've all been good for Alaska, yet we end up with so little after essentially conceeding so, so much. They constantly "one-up" Alaskans/us. A change in tactic must occur or special session and next year will just be another repeat of us working our butts off and only being able to take the tiniest of baby steps towards reform... and we'll need very impacting messages to be publicized about all these shenanigans. I've cc'd Comm. Dept.

Don't know why we pussyfoot around these guys who are 1) asking for millions in capital projects and 2) refusing to lift burdensome fees on the backs off Alaskans, small businesses. Let alone refusing to address the slanted playing field killing the state's smaller medical facilities.

I wonder if I ever had that lunch with the Homer bidder. Yikes-- does anyone remember?

Frank- did you see wesley's blog on biz lic? Shoot. Don't know who's idea it was, but it was all about transparency! Letting alaskans know who was sitting on important bills(s). Stedman's comment was the email shouldn't have been sent, instead the chairman should have been requested to move it! What a joke. How many times was he asked to move it? Well maybe the blog/story will give the issue publicity and the follow up can open a door to also speak about tire tax and other good bills they're still trying to kill because they're either greedy spenders and/or they hate to see our name on anything that could pass. I wish Mike wouldn't have given a "no comment" comment in reply to wesley's questions on this.

Hilarious!

Reminds me of the Homer Library luncheon where Lt Gov Leman's lunch barely fetched $200, and Candidate Palin's lunch fetched $650 for the Library Foundation.

John and Nicole? Harris is married??

Clark and I were at a fundraiser tonight for Special Olympics and one of the auction items was a package trip to Fairbanks in the old Murkowski jet for 7, a stay at Pikes and lunch w/Binkley and his wife. It was secured by John and Nicole Harris. There was only one bidder and it was Nicole Harris. It was valued at $4,000 and she got it for $1,500. :)

Harold got this in the budget? How? If he spoke for me, saying I supported giving him $$$, he's way off base.

If Harold spoke for admin and said we supported this, he's way off base and was deceptive.

There's $4 million in the capital budget for ANGDA. I believe this is seperate than the $8 million the administration requested that was not included.

even the Geat Alaska Pizza Company.
Most seem willing to help.
I have set up a account for Alex and his troop through a company based in Ca. called "Combact Ready" in San Clemente.Ca. (949)276-2333, Travis Box or Collin Owens are in charge.Please, if you can help me, help all the young men and women who fight for us and would die for us while asking nothing in return I would be forever grateful. As Alaskan's we need to join together to make sure these brave soldiers have EXACTLY what they need to do their job, that WE sent them there to do. Please Governor Palin, just take one moment to call Travis Box or Collin Owens @ (949)276-2333 and they can tell what and why OUR children need Alaskans to pull together and help.
How sad my son a "Lance Corporal" of the U.S.M.C. had to call his Mother for help, for proper "gear"
Thank-You Joanne Casqueira
